Introduction to Chromebook Data Science

A spreadsheet!

The diagram illustrates a spreadsheet grid. A large grey arrow points from the text 'A spreadsheet!' to the grid. The grid has 5 rows and 4 columns. The first column is labeled 'rows' and contains numbers 1 through 5. The first row is labeled 'columns' and contains letters A, B, and C. A blue rectangle highlights the cell at the intersection of row 1 and column A, with a blue arrow pointing to it from the text 'a cell'.

Any cell in a spreadsheet can be identified by column letter and row number.

This cell is "A2"

The Basics of Tidy Data:

1. Each type of data in one column.
2. Each data point in one row.
3. One spreadsheet for each "kind" of data.
4. If you have more than one spreadsheet, they should include a column in the table that allows them to be linked.

Project Question:

“How does the price of a bestselling book relate to how much the author is charging for that book?”
