Introduction to Chromebook Data Science

A spreadsheet!

The diagram illustrates a spreadsheet grid. The columns are labeled A, B, and C, and the rows are labeled 1 through 5. A blue outline highlights the cell at the intersection of column A and row 1. A blue square handle is located at the bottom-right corner of this cell. A blue arrow points from the text 'a cell' to the highlighted cell. A large grey arrow points from the text 'A spreadsheet!' to the grid. A bracket labeled 'columns' spans the top of the grid, and a bracket labeled 'rows' spans the left side of the grid.

Any cell in a spreadsheet can be identified by column letter and row number.

This cell is "A2"

The Basics of Tidy Data:

1. Each type of data in one column.
2. Each data point in one row.
3. One spreadsheet for each "kind" of data.
4. If you have more than one spreadsheet, they should include a column in the table that allows them to be linked.

Project Question:

“How does the price of a bestselling book relate to how much the author is charging for that book?”
